THE OLD BUILDINGS OF THE CAPE

Godfried Lotter (geb. 1780) in samewerking met Joseph Arrowsmith. Die beker is egter eenvouliger van vorm al het dit dieselfde oorvormige handvätsels: 'n taamlik suiwer klassieke vorm. Ook die versiering en graveerwerk - waarskynlik van die hand van Arrowsmith – is eenvoudiget, en geheel in die beskaafde styl van die Regency, met akantusblare langs die voet, touvormige bande langs die bekernad en ribwerk op die deksel, be kroon deur 'n figuurije met 'n anker (die Hoop).

'n Vergelyking van hierdie beker met die wat in 1829 aan John Falrbairn, redakteur van die SA Commercial Advertiser, geskenk is, toon beter as enigiets anders die verskille tussen die beskaafde ingetoënheid van die Regency en die soms tot vulgarifeit vervallende oorladenheid van onsamenhangende elemente van die later 19de eeu - die begin van die Victoriaanse styl. Die maker van die Fairbairn-beker (vir die som van £150) was Lawrence Twentyman, wat in die Advertiser geroem is vir die ,beauty and chasteness' van sy ontwerp. Die trompetvorm van die beker self is redelik genoeg, maar vérregaand is die handvatsels in die vorm van volute, die voetstuk met vier bokpote wat selfs vir die ligsinnigste rococo-smaak van driekwart-een tevore onaanvaarbaar sou gewees het, asook die aangeplakte plantaardige dekorasies sonder respek vir die bekervorm.

In alle billikheid jeens Twentyman moet genoem word dat hy twee jaar tevore die maker was van 'n heelwar moeier stuk, 'n beker wat die burgers van Stellenbosch geskenk het aan hul landdros, D. J. van Ryneveld. Dit toon dieselfde trompetvorm, egter sonder die vietpoot onder die basis. Die gedrewe en gegraveerde ornament (bande van druiwetrosse en -blare, klein handvat-sels met maskers aan die beker vasgeheg, die Stellenbosse wapen omring deur 'n krans, en 'n pynappel bu op die deksel) is weliswaar eklekties maar mooi uitgevoer en nog net binne die perke van die goeie smaak. Noemenswaardig is nog die patroon wat Twentyman en ook sy tydgenoot Fredrik Waldek aangebring het op die handvatsels van hulle varke en lepels, die skulpmotief in Engeland bekend as die "King's patrern".

Hoewel van weinig kunshistoriese waarde, moet hier volkeligheidshalwe die kortstondige bestaan van 'n Kaapstadse glassnywetheid genoem word, nl. van 1879-ca. 1885. Die sg. Woodstockse glas' besit grotendeels die vorms van die destydse Engelse Victoriaanse glaswerk, en is feilik uitshuiftik versier met die toe gebruiklike varingpatroon, egter baie grof met die slypsieen aangebring. Dit, en die betreklike dikheid van die glas maak hierdie Kaapse glas gemaklik herkenbaar.

Volkskunsvlyt en koperware

Hierdie boek wil ook nie meer as slegs in die verbygaan verwys na die bestaan in die 19de eeu van verskillende soorte volkskunsvlyt in Suid-Afrika. Baie volop is dit juis nie, en dit dateer feitlik alles uit die Engelse tyd. Vrouens – meestal jong meisies – het hulle some onledig gehou met die maak van merklappe en ornamentele borduurwerk. Daar is goeie voorbeelde in die Paarlse was honoured for his formative contribution to the extensive documentation and preservation of South Africa's Cape Dutch architecture and cultural-historical treasures, and for his contribution to the fostering of an appreciation for the country's cultural heritage among South Africans and foreigners.

Among his books are The old houses of the Cape (1968), The old buildings of the Cape (2004), Old towns and villages of the Cape (2006) and Drie eeue kuns in Suid-Afrika (Three centuries of art in South Africa, 1981), in which he emphasises the high quality of the artwork created by South Africa's indigenous people.

He was curator of the Stellenbosch Museum and worked at Groot Constantia, the South African National Art Gallery and the Michaelis Art Collection.

He was honoured with a knighthood by the Dutch queen in 2001.
